RE: PA Presidential/US Senate Statewide Poll Results

DATE: October 18, 2012

Following is a brief overview of our latest statewide poll conducted in the Keystone State from October 11th – 13th (prior to the 10/16 debate) with 1,376 likely voters. The poll was commissioned on behalf of the Republican State Committee of Pennsylvania, with permission to release its complete findings. Below is a summary of key findings, followed by top line results and an explanation of survey methodology.

- GOP Nominee Mitt Romney has taken the lead over Barack Obama in the Keystone State by a 49% to 45% margin, reversing Obama's 2-point lead in SP&R's last poll conducted 10/3-10/6. This marks the first time any publicly released poll has shown Romney with a lead. An additional 2% are voting for Libertarian Gary Johnson, with 1% for Green Party candidate Jill Stein. Only 2% remain undecided.
- Romney's lead represents a 6-point jump in support when compared with 43% support this summer, while Obama's 45% shows 3-point drop from a high of 48% in past polls. Romney continues to keep a strong lock on the GOP vote, winning Republicans by an 86-9 margin, while still siphoning 18% of the Democratic vote mainly from social and cultural Democrats, affectionately referred to as "Reagan Democrats". Romney also leads by 12 points among registered Independents (47-35) - a statistically significant finding perhaps the first time proving Independent and swing voters are breaking his way.
- Romney's lead is proof his strong debate performances are having a lasting impact, as evidenced by our last poll conducted 10/4-10/6 which showed Mitt Romney with a healthy favorable image (+6 positive, or 48-42 favorable) and even better than Obama's (+3 positive, or 50-47). This is clear evidence the debates have helped not only win over swing and undecided voters, but are neutralizing the negative perceptions Pennsylvanians had of Romney from negative TV ads sponsored by Obama-supported super PACs. Furthermore, regional support shows Romney has managed to run up big margins in Western Pa. with conservative Democrats and at the same time make significant inroads in the socially-moderate, vote-rich Philadelphia suburbs where Romney now leads 48-46. Winning the suburban Philadelphia collar counties would be an historic accomplishment since no Republican presidential nominee has carried these counties in decades.
- Also in the poll, GOP Senate nominee Tom Smith leads Democratic US Senator Bob Casey 48-46, technically within the poll's 2.64% margin of error. This is perhaps the first poll showing Smith with a lead – representing a 12-point gain from polling this summer while Casey's support has flat-lined. SP&R was the first to show this race a tossup, with Casey leading only 46-41 in a September poll sponsored by the Pittsburgh Tribune Review.

Methodology: This poll was commissioned by Republican State Committee of Pennsylvania. Completed interviews were conducted October 11-13, 2012 using automated polling software both owned by Susquehanna Polling and Research and programmed by our internal survey associates. The universe for the poll includes likely general election voters who have prior vote history in at least one of G11, G10, G09 and/or G08, as well as new registered voters since November 2011. Pre-qualified voters are then asked to complete the survey by scoring their answers to a pre-recorded series of questions using their telephone key pads. The surveys are carefully monitored to ensure a representative sample of Pennsylvania's electorate is achieved based on party, geographic location, age, gender and other demographics. Results can be statistically weighted to adjust for either an over or under-sample of respondents within demographic groups. The margin of error for a sample size of 1,376 interviews is +/-2.64% at the 95% confidence level.
